

Human Rights Due-Diligence Framework

As an organization it is of utmost importance that we undertake our business with honesty and integrity and ensure a safe and conducive work environment for everyone, free of discrimination and harassment. We are committed to uphold and respect human rights. For the same, we will follow a due diligence framework which is aligned with the "OECD Due Diligence Guidance for Responsible Supply Chains".

Scope and Identify

This step focusses on identifying potential and actual issues in our own operations and its supply chain. It includes the following sub-steps:

- 1. Scoping the risks of harm in own operations and in its supply chain
- 2. Conducting a self-assessment of the own operations
- 3. Assessing suppliers associated with higher-risks
- 4. Assessing the organisation's relationship to impacts

It is important that the coverage of this step includes proper representation of all the groups which are vulnerable to human rights issues irrespective of the nature of work and employment relationship. Some of the identified vulnerable groups are:

- Employees
- Workers (migrant / contracted / daily wage)
- Women
- Children
- Indigenous people
- Local Communities

Apart from this, it is essential to at least include the follow human rights risks:

- Forced labour
- Child labour

- Discrimination
- Health & safety
- Working condition
- Freedom of association
- Right to collective bargaining
- Equal remuneration

An important point to note is that, the above list is not exhaustive, depending on the nature of work, groups and human rights issues can be included or excluded from the above list with proper justification during the assessment process. A template due-diligence questionnaire (Annexure I) is also prepared to aid the assessment process. This questionnaire can also be modified based on the human rights issues, nature of works and vulnerable groups.

Prevent and Mitigate

After the identification of vulnerable groups and human rights is completed, the next step is to understand the underlying causes of the identified risks. Some risks could be driven by direct employment relationships and working conditions or some due to indirect causes like discrimination or gender bias. Once the understanding is developed, existing policies, systems and procedures should be reviewed and a corrective action plan for providing appropriate safeguard to cease, prevent or mitigate the identified risks should be prepared. The newly established systems should complement & work in conjunction with the existing safeguard mechanisms.

Track

Having identified risks that might drive human rights issues and devising appropriate systems to prevent and mitigate them. The next steps comes verification, monitoring and validation of the progress made on the prevention and mitigation mechanism and assessing its effectiveness. The timing of verification, monitoring or validation should correspond to the severity and nature of the issue identified. If through monitoring, it is determined that issues are not being addressed, a verification should be conducted to check whether actions were taken in the first place or not.

Remediate

The core purpose of conducting due-diligence is to avoid harm. Thus it is imperative that a formalised process is established through which individuals or groups can raise concerns. We have established an Ethics Helpline Portal (https://www.arvind.ethicshelpline.in/portal/en/home) that can be used to report any suspected or confirmed incidents. This portal is managed by a third-party to ensure an independent, impartial and neutral party receive any concerns.

Communicate

The last step in the due-diligence process is Communication which should be done annually at a minimum. The communication will include details about the due diligence processes, including how we have addressed potential and actual harm. We will ensure that our communication is relevant, accurate, current, clear, user friendly and enables intended users to use information.
